

Dwight D. Ham is currently Associate Professor of Business at The Master's University and has served over 40 years in business as CFO, COO, and a member of various Board of Directors managing financial reporting, accounting, P&L, and operations. He spent 14 years in banking and served on the Board of Directors of an independent bank. He also has been part owner of an engineering electronics firm that designed and manufactured underwater electrical systems used primarily offshore in severe underwater environments as well as a manufacturing firm serving the plumbing and irrigation industries. He is also part owner of a small business that manufactures and distributes Guardian Drain Lock for commercial use throughout the United States. Mr. Ham has assisted in the sale of several businesses as well negotiations in international business dealings. He has been a member of Independent Citizen's Advisory and Oversight Committee for the Los Angeles METRO for over 12 years and a member of The Board of Directors for the Bank of Santa Clarita where he has been a member for over five years. He is also serves as a member of several philanthropic boards. Mr. Ham is a Certified Management Accountant issued by The Institute of Management Accounting (IMA). He received his MBA from Pepperdine University in 1976 and MABC from The Master's University in 2003. He is currently enrolled at George Fox University in their Doctorate of Business Administration program.