There’s a transportation revolution afoot in LA, and Metro is leading the charge. There are big changes happening, and we want LA County’s small businesses to thrive as we build.

Construction can be challenging for “mom and pop” businesses located along transit corridors, yet there is opportunity for growth as our communities become more connected.

With the establishment of Metro’s two first-ever pilot programs targeted at helping small businesses, we are able to provide support and assistance to impacted businesses as we build for the future.

Metro’s Pilot Business Interruption Fund and Crenshaw/LAX Pilot Business Solution Center have been supporting small businesses for more than two years. Look inside and learn about the accomplishments these programs have brought to the communities impacted by Metro’s construction.

“We recognize the vital role that small businesses have not only on our economy but also our communities. Metro is committed to supporting the small business community as we build the future of transportation in LA County. It’s innovative programs such as the Business Interruption Fund and the Crenshaw/LAX Pilot Business Solution Center that allow Metro to support “mom and pop” businesses to sustain construction so they can realize the economic benefits of transit rail.”

Phillip A. Washington, Chief Executive Officer
Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority

BUSINESS INTERRUPTION FUND
Recognizing the importance of supporting small businesses during construction as vital to the economic sustainability of communities, Metro’s Board of Directors authorized the agency to designate $10,000,000 annually to be used for implementation of the Business Interruption Fund.

Through an innovative collaboration with Pacific Coast Regional Small Business Development Corporation (PCR), Metro has successfully provided financial assistance to more than 200 small “mom and pop” businesses located along the Crenshaw/LAX Transit Project, the Little Tokyo area and the 2nd/Broadway segment of the Regional Connector, and Section 1 of the Purple Line Extension.

The BIF has demonstrated Metro’s ongoing commitment to the communities and business corridors that have been impacted by transit rail construction. With 89% of businesses remaining open 12 months after receiving a grant, the program continues to thrive and support the businesses’ ability to sustain through the challenges of construction.

Small businesses that have received grants represent an amazingly diverse business community that is iconic of LA County. Owners of restaurants, salons, video game stores, production studios, and other specialty businesses have been helped by the BIF.

Recognizing Metro’s commitment to being a trusted community builder and partner, it has been a priority to outreach and engage business and community members. In delivering the BIF, Metro staff has attended more than 100 community meetings and events, and hosted more than 40 workshops throughout our diverse communities. This level of engagement has resulted in extraordinary confidence from business owners and community members and continues to demonstrate Metro’s commitment to help businesses as we build for the future.

Sometimes our “mom and pop” neighbors see their businesses impacted by Metro’s rail construction. So we created the Business Interruption Fund to provide access to financial assistance, helping these neighbors through the construction process.

Crenshaw/LAX Transit Project
Business Solution Center
Metro established the first-ever Business Solution Center to provide immediate and hands-on services to small businesses along the Crenshaw/LAX Transit Project corridor.

The BSC was developed to serve as a direct link for small businesses impacted by construction of the Crenshaw/LAX transit line to a network of special support services within the Crenshaw and Inglewood communities. Metro’s first-ever BSC provides small businesses with direct access to resources through the establishment of a business resource center located within the Crenshaw/LAX corridor.

In recognition of the challenges that transit rail construction can have on small businesses, yet also the pathways to economic vitality that transit rail can bring to communities and businesses, the BSC is another demonstration of Metro’s commitment to being a trusted partner that is invested in the diverse communities of LA County. Small businesses impacted by the transit rail construction have access to supportive services delivered by a team of small business and economic development professionals.

Through an innovative model, Metro in partnership with Del Richardson & Associates, Inc. and a collaborative with Vermont Slauson Economic Development Corporation and the Los Angeles Urban League has delivered a team of small business and economic development professionals to provide hands-on assistance to more than 300 small businesses.

Through the innovative collaboration, Metro continues to deliver not only hands-on business development services to small businesses within the Crenshaw and Inglewood communities, but also referrals to experts in areas, such as accounting management, access to financial capital, brand development, marketing, social media and specialized business service areas, resulting in more than 900 individual referrals.

Metro’s goal is not only to help businesses sustain throughout construction, but also to support them through the realization of the economic benefits that transit rail brings to communities; hence the BSC encourages small businesses to envision the future of their business by focusing on long-term business planning, and leveraging technology and social media.

In delivering Metro’s first-ever pilot BIF and BSC programs, we recognized the importance of direct community outreach and in-person engagement as the most effective opportunity for building community trust and overall engagement in the programs.

The great diversity of the business communities that comprise our county demonstrated the importance for us to deliver each program through a collaboration consisting of a diverse team of small business professionals and Metro staff.

The success of the small business programs require ongoing and clear communication between program staff, community members, constituents and stakeholders.

Capturing feedback and promoting engagement of the small business community early into the implementation of the small business programs provided an opportunity to enhance the structure of each of the pilot programs.

In delivering these innovative small business programs through the defined program eligibility requirements and guidelines for the BIF, Metro has ensured equitable access to the program and available financial resources for businesses in each of the transit rail project corridors.

The BSC has referred over 250 businesses to resource providers, experts and economic development professionals throughout LA County.
More than 800 jobs have been sustained through financial assistance provided by the BIF.
“BIF has been a true partner in helping us survive through construction.”

– Business owner Rumi Yamaguchi of Mitsuru Café has received support from the BIF during construction of Metro’s Regional Connector Transit Project, Little Tokyo area.
“As a small business in downtown LA, this program is helping us contend with the challenges inherent in a project of this scope. We hope Metro will continue to support us throughout construction.”

– Business owner Pete Galindo of Civic Center Studios has received support from the BIF during construction of Metro’s Regional Connector Transit Project, 2nd/Broadway segment.
Our commitment to supporting communities through innovative small business programs has garnered attention throughout the industry.

We’ve received attention and interest throughout the public sector and transportation industry, both nationally and abroad from:

> New York MTA, Second Avenue Subway Project
> Federal Transit Agency (FTA)
> Honolulu Authority for Rapid Transportation
> Melbourne Metro Rail Authority
> KPMG Tel Aviv, Ministry of Finance of the Government of Israel
> Los Angeles Department Water and Power (LADWP)

THE BIF AND BSC COLLABORATIVES HAVE CONDUCTED MORE THAN 350 DIRECT OUTREACH ACTIVITIES TO SUCCESSFULLY ENGAGE THE SMALL BUSINESS COMMUNITY.
Metro is doing more than building transportation infrastructure. We’re building connections among communities, and fueling economic growth all over LA County. We intend to support small businesses as we frame the future.
